Toronto District School Board

How do you secure accountability through equity leadership?

"Securing accountability through equity leadership means creating the conditions for staff to analyze identity-based data, confront bias and take collective responsibility for student progress so that achievement and improvement remain transparent, human-rights aligned and grounded in the lived experiences of students we serve. For me, accountability is an act of care involving setting clear expectations, monitoring impact and communicating openly with families and communities so those most affected by systemic barriers stay at the centre of every decision."
